EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

DUKES has declined, and we are resigned.

REFORM at Harrisburg appears to have died a premature death.

BIG DAVY DAVIS will be a candidate in 1884, as usual. He has been known for years as the great fence sitter.

CANADIANS are enjoying a dog show at Ottawa. It is pronounced highly interesting. How could it be otherwise?

THE bill compelling telegraph and telephone companies to place their wires under ground in New York and Brooklyn after March 1, 1885, has passed the New York Senate.

PROFESSOR SUMNER is still trying to prove that he understands the tariff question, but he isn't making any headway. He should confine himself to boating, football and other legitimate college studies.

A GREEDY Washington lawyer has attached $3,500, one-half of the "Betty and the Baby" fund, for alleged services in defending Sergeant Mason. The wonder is that he did not attach the whole of it, as Washington lawyers are remarkable for their rapacity.

DEFALCATIONS all around the country are reported almost daily. The reasons for them seem to be that the officials' salaries are too small, and the curse of the age is the ruling passion for speculation and the immediate accumulation of wealth. We have many social evils to cope with, and this is not by any means the least.

THE California legislature has been considering a proposition from the state printer to print all the school text books used in the public school to save money. Upon investigation it appears that, at a low estimate, the job will cost nearly $200,000, about twice as much as the public printer estimated and a great deal more than the books can be bought for on an honest contract with school book publishers.

THE official stenographic report of the Guiteau trial, as published by the Government printing office, Washington, makes three solid octavo volumes of some nine hundred pages each. All the long drawn out testimony, the speeches of counsel, the countless interruption and blasphemies of the prisoner are there recorded with faithful exactness, in convenient shape to go "thundering down the ages."

JUST now the Democrats are hard at work trying to gerrymander the state in the congressional apportionment bill so as to secure a majority. But Hon. W. J. Hulings, of Venango, who has paid as much attention to this matter as any one member of either house, insists that a fair congressional apportionment cannot be made which will not give at least eighteen Republican members. An examination of the subject by any unprejudiced man, will convince him of the correctness of Mr. Hulings' statement.

AN influence which will have more and more weight in precipitating the depreciation of silver is the tendency of all corporations with good credit to make all their bonds payable in gold coin. Every loan that has been taken to any great extent has been made payable in gold, both principal and interest. Nations cannot afford to be less scrupulous than private corporations, and the tentency to stipulate for gold payment indicates how serious is the apprehension that the time will soon come when the debts may be paid in silver at much less cost than in gold.

Harmony in New York.

There is a plain tendency among Republicans throughout the country, says the Philadelphia Press, to heal their differences and come together on the broad platform of progressive Republicanism. This drift is clearly manifest in Pennsylvania, and is becoming apparent in New York. Of course the real vital harmony which will pervade the ranks and invigorate the whole mass of the party cannot be attained without recognizing and respecting the essential condition—that the intelligent and honest will of the party shall rule its spirit, policy and action. Politicians may plan; leaders of the factions may agree to combine, yet unless the people are satisfied by the unmistakable observance and enthronement of enlightened public sentiment, all such efforts will be abortive. But with a sincere purpose to establish popular rule in the party Conventions and party decrees, there is no obstacle to cordial union and complete success.

The schism in New York has seemed more threatening and more difficult to heal than the discord in this State. It is gratifying to observe however, that the effort for a settlement of differences is making hopeful progress even there. The discussion on the part of the newspapers has developed a general desire for peace, and behind this public expression there is a practical movement, which may be productive of good results. A conference of leading representatives of both wings of the party has been called at Saratoga in June for the purpose of considering how harmony can be restored. Ex-Governor Cornell is credited with suggesting this scheme, and as he is a sagacious politician and as the employment of such means is quite in the style of his practical methods, the report may easily be believed. Indeed it is only a repetition of a plan which he successfully tried a few years ago under somewhat similar circumstances.

The stormy and acrimonious Convention of 1877 left the Republicans of New York divided and embittered. It was in that Convention that Mr. Conkling made his envenomed and famous attack on Mr. Curtis, and on the administration of President Hayes. In the following election the Republicans were defeated, and the sting of the angry struggle rankled in many hearts throughout the State. Unless this feeling could be appeased and Republicans of all shades united in the earnest battle, there was every prospect that the defeat would be repeated in 1878. Very much depended on that contest. Mr. Conkling's own seat in the Senate was at stake, and the future of the party depended largely on the issue. There was a conviction that no effort should be spared to secure harmony, and, accordingly, Mr. Cornell called a conference of representatives of all sides at Saratoga in August—a month in advance of the State Convention. More than a hundred active Republicans responded, and, though they did little in the way of practical action, they stimulated a sentiment which did very much towards promoting peace and harmony. The State Convention which followed was discreetly managed, and the result was the hearty union of the Republicans and a great victory in the ensuing election.

It will be a happy circumstance if the repetition of this plan shall be rewarded with a repetition of its success. Just so far as it shall serve to make the party action responsive to the plain will of the people, it will contribute to the redemption and the triumph of Republicanism. Indeed, the restoration of Republican supremacy in New York must be less a work of the politicians than of the people themselves. There is no good reason why the State should not be recaptured. The Democratic Governor and the Democratic Legislature have both proved to be grotesque failures, and it only needs common sense and common prudence on the part of the Republicans to recover their lost ground.

THE Illinois decision just reached that a sleeping or palace-car company is a common carrier, and hence required to let its berths or seats to any comer, is a change in the law as previously laid down in that state, but it reaches the same practical results as other general decisions on this subject. The New York courts, in a case which turned on the ejection of a passenger who took a seat in a palace car because there was no seat elsewhere in the train, held that passengers could not be expected to know who owned the particular cars offered them for common travel, and that the railroad company was responsible for the assault. So in Ohio, where a man's spine was injured by a careless porter who left a berth up so that it dropped on him, the courts decided that the common carrier drawing the car was responsible. On the other hand, a sleeping car company in Indianapolis which sold a through ticket to a man who failed to get a through berth, found that it was no defense against damage that the car was rented to another company. A sleeping car is not an inn, as the man who left $31.35 under his pillow while he went for a drink found out but some one must be responsible for it as a common carrier, and the Illinois decision inclines to the view that the palace or sleeping car company is such, not the railroad company.

THE Philadelphia Press says that "it seems strange that in a State of nearly 5,000,000 inhabitants there should be a call for legislation to check the ravages of wolves and foxes. The good people of McKean County, in this State, long ago induced the State to offer a bounty on the heads of these obnoxious animals, but still their numbers grow and the county now asks the State to offer still greater stimulus to their extermination. Two bills are pending in the House of Representatives having the favorable endorsement of the Committee on Agriculture, recommending a bounty of fifty dollars on every wolf killed and fifty cents for each fox. This it is assumed will be a sufficient inducement to the bold yoemanry of McKean County to hunt these vermin down, and save the barnyards and sheepfolds of the McKean County farmers from their nightly depredations.

THE House treated with unexpected disfavor the bill making any waiver of the three hundred dollar exemption law invalid, as it was rejected by an overwhelming majority If this waiver of exemption only affected the man who makes the waiver it would make less difference, but the exemption law was intended to favor his family, primarily, by securing to them a limited amount of property from execution and sale on levy and distress for rent. The New York courts have held, in interpreting an exemption law similar to our own, that a waiver of exemption was against public policy and invalid. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania held that it was a personal privilege that the debtor could waive. The bill defeated on Wednesday would have made exemption in this State as secure as, under the decision of the courts, it is in New York. The practice that obtains of claiming everything possible, and having it it appraised within $300, has created a strong prejudice against an otherwise beneficent act.

THERE seems to be no such thing as fairly getting away from the winter, which, according to the almanac, we ought by this time to have left behind us. If for a day or two the weather is appropriately pleasant, and the advent of spring appears to be not altogether a hollow mockery, no sooner are our hopes raised and our pores opened than there comes a frost, a killing frost, or else a downfall of snow.

Editorial Etchings.

The House was evidently inclined to dispose of the case of Representative-elect Dukes in the easiest way possible, and it has been done without establishing any precedent beyond the questionable right of a Representative-elect to resign his seat with the assent of the House, before qualifying as a member. Call it by what other name we may, Mr. Dukes declines to accept the seat, or resigns his lawful right to qualify as a member, and the House accepts it. This action apparently meets the necessity in the Dukes case, as the seventh article of the Constitution states that "any person refusing to take the said oath or affirmation shall forfeit his office;" but while that provision technically covers the case, it was obviously not intended to apply to a Representative elect who could and would take the prescribed oath, but was prevented by circumstances entirely outside of the purpose of the oath of office.

There are signs of reaction among physicians against the practice of ordering patients into the South, or to the Bermudas during the winter months. A Boston physician, who deprecates the custom of sending invalids on long journeys and exposing them to radical changes in every way, advises persons whom he finds in need of a more bracing climate simply to go from Boston to the higher and hilly country further inland in Massachusetts, instead of ordering them to Colorado, just as New York physicians are sending their patients to the Adirondacks. Those who spend a winter in Florida are apt to find themselves much more susceptible to the effects of our northern climate on the approach of the next winter. If they return too early from the South the results are signally dangerous.

If dining and wining and tea-drinking are essential features of a public career, President Diaz and party should score a big success in their present mission to this country, whatever its object may be. All progressive, intelligent people will hope that the contact of representative Mexicans with the wide-awake Yankee race will serve to infuse into that moribund Republic a spark or two of real nineteenth century vitality. With a European occupation nearly a century older than that of the United States, it appears to to have achieved nothing of greater importance than an annual political revolution and beans and lentils sufficient to keep a moderate population from starving. Its splendid climate, its great mineral wealth and its tropical productions ought to furnish the foundations for a very prosperous State. With modern improvements in mining transportation and agriculture there is no good reason why it should not rank high among the great brotherhood of nations. But it will need the services of somebody who don't spend his time in feasting and wine drinking if this prosperity is to be achieved. Good, old-fashioned Anglo-Saxon brains and hard work will do it, and that's the only thing that will.

CHARLES STUART PARNELL, the Irish agitator, has written a letter to the Globe, an American journal, which may be supposed to voice his sentiments. Charles says that the Scotch and English poor are more down-trodden and in a worse condition than Irish peasants. Why don't Charles turn his attention to the work of aiding these unfortunate persons, then? We are at a loss to understand the peculiar significance of Charles' tergiversations in the light of his past actions as illuminated by his recent letter. We should always aid those who stand most in need of assistance.

A MASSACHUSETTS jury convicted a careless conductor of manslaughter for causing an accident. The risk on a railroad is decreased by every jury casualty of this kind.

THE British government is rich, and it needs to be, for royalty and titled dignities cost it a very pretty plum. Several heavy pensions are still paid which were originally granted in the time of Charles II., William and Mary, Anne and the Georges; and the church draws a great deal of money out of the state. The Queen and royal family are very well paid—the sum total being £556,000—of which her majesty receives £386,000—something over £1,000 per day. Of this £60,000 goes to the Queen's privy purse—her pin money, so to speak—and £303,750 to the expenses and salaries of her household. The Prince of Wales is only allowed £40,000 and his wife £10,000, and he is always poor and in debt. The Queen, however, is very rich. She still has the old crown estates, producing large revenues, and she has private property to the value of many millions—farms, castles, leasehold city property and investments in the funds and foreign securities, including United States bonds. The Queen's personal property would stock a fine museum and she owns one of the noblest art galleries in existence. In fact, she is very comfortably fixed for an elderly widow, with not too many poor relations.

THE execution at Windsor, Vt., of Lucy Emmeline Meeker is notable because of the infrequency with which women are condemned to suffer, and actually do suffer, the extreme penalty of the law. Crimes of violence are for obvious reasons less frequently committed by women than by men, but when a woman is indicted for a capital offense, it is rarely that a jury can be brought to convict her. Even if she is convicted, executive clemency is commonly exercised in her behalf. But the murder committed by the woman Meeker was too atrocious for either jury or Governor to interfere in her protection, and so the law was allowed to have its course.

MR. CONKLING, the New York man who shot his sister's seducer, is to stand a trial after all, and notwithstanding the complaisance of the accommodating magistrate who ordered his discharge. The Grand Jury has returned an indictment against him charging him with manslaughter in the first degree, and now if he can excuse his conduct in a legal way, he will have an opportunity of doing so in the course of law. Much to his credit, he made no attempt to escape, but gave himself up without causing any trouble.

ONE more repudiating southern state has discovered that what is sauce for the goose is not by any means sauce for the gander. The state treasurer of Arkansas has been discovered to be $233,000 short in his accounts. He would gladly follow the example of the state by repudiating the debt, but the legislature is unable to take that view of it, and very illogically has instructed the attorney general to sue him and his bondsmen. This is but another illustration of the great difference it makes whose ox is gored.

REV. DR. HIGBEE is the subject of adverse criticism for refusing Senator Coxe's clerks to aid him in overhauling the accounts of the Educational Department in order to see if the books and figures show a correct report of those affairs.

THE lawyer who wants half of the $7000 contributed by the people of this country for the support of "Betty and the baby" ought to propose a partnership with Dukes. They would make a good team.—Altoona Tribune.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID DAVIS are going to California. We hope the portly Senator will not upset this terrestrial sphere when he reaches the Pacific coast.

CONNECTICUT is agitating the question of biennial sessions of her legislature.

STEER CLEAR.

Moonlight talks,
Midnight walks,
Longing eyes,
Soothing signs,
Front gate,
Very late,
Parlor scene,

One year,
Skies clear,
Years two,
Rather blue,
Years three,
Can't agree,
County Court,

Feeling mean,
Dearest Bess,
Answer yes,
Kind kiss,
Mutual bliss,

Splendid sport,
Sorrow, sin,
Jury grin,
Divorce given,
Ferrets riven.

Interview
Papa, too,
Nothing loth,
Happy both,
Couple glad,
Have it bad.

Worried wife,
Lonely life,
Husband roams,
Wife foams,
Care cost,
Love lost.

Marriage bells,
Honeymoon
Ended soon,
Double brown,
Settled down.

WIGGINS' LITTLE STORM.

Wiggins had a little storm
Which never blew a blow,
But everywhere that Wiggins went
That storm was sure to go.

What makes the man scare people so?
The fishermen all cry;
And when the storm did not arrive
They hit him in the eye.

It followed him to Halifax,
Which was against the rule;
The people chased him to the woods
And killed him for a fool.

BABY'S WEIGHT.

How much does baby sister weigh?
We put her in the scales to-day,
And all the weights, as I am told,
Were made of sugar and of gold.

The gold and sugar high were piled,
While baby sister crowed and smiled,
Until the sugar and the gold
Were more than any scale could hold.

How much does baby sister weigh?
I heard my mother softly say
That she was much too sweet to day
For any kind of scale to weigh.

—I loved a maiden
Wondrous fair;
She'd eyes of azure
And sunny hair.
Her neck was stately,

But maids are fickle—
O my distress!—
She married a man
In the Adams Express!

Our Story Teller.

Theory vs. Facts.

"In some things women are silly and ridiculous!"

Here John Harding laid down the magazine article he had been reading, and which has for its theme the apparently inexhaustible one—the follies and shortcomings of the sex he had alluded to.

Mrs. Harding glanced from the bow she was fastening to the solemn face of the speaker.

"In some things? This is encouraging surely! I've known such quantities of men that were silly and ridiculous in so many things. What is it now, I wonder?"

Loftily oblivious to the quiet sarcasm in these words, Mr. Harding continued:

"Just look at the way they dress, for instance."

"Oh!"

"Not only devoid of common sens , but of all artistic elegance and beauty."

"Really, John," retorted Mrs. Harding, drawing her needle through her work with so much energy as t snap the thread, "however silly women may be in your estimation, I think they might know how and in what style to dress."

"They might, I suppose," was the cool response; "but that they don't is very evident. Have you read 'Dress as it Relates to Health and Beauty?'"

"No," responded Mrs. Harding, with a toss of her head. "It was written by some man, I suppose."

"No matter who it was written by; it is sound sense, every word of it. I wish you would study that article; I think it would do you an immense deal of good. I don't mean to say you haven't got sense in a good many things, which surprises me all the more that you should show so little in the way of dress."

Mrs. Harding's face grew still redder.

"John Harding!"

"There, now, Mary; don't fly into a passion because I tell you the truth, all for your own good. Just look at the trimming on your dress, for instance; according to all artistic rules the line should be unbroken from waist to feet, and here it is cut up and destroyed in half a dozen places."

"Have you ever seen me in a dress whose skirt was entirely plain, or as you term it, with the line unbroken from waist to feet?"

"No; but I should be glad to do so."

"You would? Have you any further complaint to make? If you have, I beg that you won't be backward in stating it."

"I don't mean to be. There's the hat you wear. That is what you call it, I suppose, though for any use it performs it might as well be called anything else, a mass of ribbons, feathers and flowers piled up as high as possible and worn upon the back of the head. And then your hair!"

"How would you have me arrange it, dear?"

"Why simply drawn back from the forehead and coiled low at the back of the head, so as to preserve its artistic outline. Something the way it is in that picture. See?"

Mrs. Harding glanced at the picture to which her husband pointed, that of a very lovely girl, with small, regular features, and whose wavy hair was loosely knotted at the back.

"Yes, I see; but I don't think you ever saw hair dressed in that style."

"It would be an immense improvement if you would dress it so; you'd look quite like another person."

"I think I should. But have you no further suggestions to make? Your ideas are so original that you interest me."

"Not at present," returned Mr. Harding, biting off the end of a cigar which he intended to light as soon as he got on the steps.

A few minutes later he put his head back into the room where his wife was sitting. "I shall be around with the ponies at 3, Mary. Don't keep me waiting."

Mrs. Harding belonged to that very large class of ladies whose attractions depend more or less on style of dress, and no one understood this more clearly than she. She knew her strong and weak points, and how to bring out the one and conceal the other. For instance, she had fine eyes, hair and complexion, but her featurers were rather irregular, her forehead especially being out of proportion with the rest of the face, and the form wanting in roundness of outline, but so skillfully were these defects remedied by the adjustment of hair and dress that they were scarcely noticed, and she was considered by all who knew her—her husband not excepted—to be an attractive and charming woman.

Mrs. Harding spent the greater part of the morning in the attic, overhauling a chest that had belonged to her husband's aunt, apparently well repaid for her trouble, by garments fished out of its dark depths, and which she carried to her own room. Out of one of these she fashioned a dress very similar in style to the one for which her husband had expressed so much admiration.

"I hate to disfigure myself so!" she thought, as the straight folds fell lankly around the tall and thin form, making it still more tall and thin, "but nothing else will cure our John, and if he keeps on he'll drive me frantic."

Then she proceeded to take down her heavy braids of hair, and combing it smoothly from her forehead over the ear, arranged it in a pug low at the back of the head.

"Good gracious! I don't suppose anything could make me look so much like a fool!" ejaculated Mrs. Harding as she noted the change it made in her appearance. "But no matter; it's only for this once, I guess I can stand it if he can!"

Taking a round, flat hat, very much in vogue a few years ago, and whose only ornament was a ribbon around the crown, Mrs. Harding went down into the parlor.

She did not have to wait. Ten minutes later John came up to the door in an open phæton drawn by the well matched greys that were the pride of his heart.

Running up the steps, he opened the door of the room where his wife sat.

He stared at her for a moment in dumb amazement.

"Heavens and earth, Mary, is that you? I thought it was—I don't know what. What have you been doing with yourself?"

"I have been trying to carry out the hints you gave me this morning in regard to dress. I hope it suits you and you admire its effects."

"Well, no," responded Mr. Harding, taking a critical survey of the odd-looking figure before him. "I can't say I do. To speak plainly, you look like a fright."

"I must say, John," retorted his wife, with an injured air, "that you are very difficult to suit. I have spent the greater part of the morning in following the suggestions you gave me at breakfast, and still you find fault. What is it now, I'd like to know. Here is the unbroken sweep of the skirt, the classic outline of the head—I think that is what you call it. And you surely cannot say that this hat is too high, or that its 'elegant simplicity'—I quote your words—is destroyed by any superabundance of flowers, feathers and ribbons."

Mr. Harding turned very red.

"That is all nonsense, Mary. I had only three hours at my disposal, and it's now 3.30. I thought I should find you all ready."

"I shall be ready in half a minute," responded his wife tying on her hat.

Mr. Harding looked at her in horrified astonishment.

"Do you think that I am going to take you out in such a dress as that? Why you look like an escaped lunatic!"

Just here the door bell rang.

"It's Judge Howe," said Mr. Harding, as he listened to the voice, in reply to the servant who answered it.

"He's come expressly to see you. For pity's sake, go up stairs and put on something decent. I wouldn't have him see you in that dowdy thing for any consideration!"

"Will you promise—"

"I'll promise anything," interposed Mr. Harding, drawing his wife toward the door which opened into the back parlor, and through which she disappeared just as their visitor was announced.

In an almost incredible short space of time Mrs. Harding entered the parlor, where her husband and their guest were seated, looking so different that no one not intimately acquainted with her, would have recognized her.

Mr. Harding drew a long sigh of relief as he looked at the pretty, tastily attired woman of whom he had so often spoken to his friend, Judge Howe, and to whom he was so proud to present her.

In the gay and animated conversation that followed, and all the pleasant thoughts to which it gave rise, he forgot everything else. Not so with Mrs. Harding. As soon as the door closed after their visitor, she turned her laughing eyes full upon her husband's face

"Now, John, let us have a fair and clear understanding. I want to suit you, if it is a possible thing. Which of those two styles of dressing do you wish me to adopt?"

"I shouldn't suppose you'd ask such a question, Mary. Seeing you in the peculiar costume you assumed is quite enough for me, I assure you."

"I assumed it to please you—don't forget that."

"You failed in your object, then. To speak frankly, I didn't suppose it possible for you to look so downright ugly in anything."

"You are over complimentary," laughed Mrs. Harding. "But no matter; if you are satisfied I am. Don't look so crestfallen, John; you are not a bit more inconsistent than the rest of your sex, who give ours so much sage advice in regard to matters they know nothing about. If the wives and daughters of these modern Solomons should dress as they advise other people's wives and daughters to do they wouldn't be seen in the streets with them."

Thad Stevens' Hair.

John L. Thomas, ex-Congressman and now collector of the port of Baltimore, tells this good story about the great commoner of Pennsylvania: When I was in congress I used to be a frequenter of the room of Thad Stevens. One day, while talking together, a visitor entered unexpectedly. She was a tall, raw-boned woman, with ox-bow spectacles on the bridge of her nose and a bulky green gingham umbrella. She handed Mr. Stevens a card with the words: "Abigail Meecham, Kenebunkport, Me.," and said:

"Do I have the honor of beholding the Hon. Thad Stevens, of Pennsylvania?"

Somewhat embarassed, Mr. Stevens acknowledged his identity and asked his visitor to be seated.

"Thank you, no," was the reply, "but I wish to say, sir, in my quiet home down east I have heard of your glorious efforts in behalf of the emancipated slave, of your heroic treatment of the southern question, and of your undying hostility to the enemies of your country, to ask the privilege of shaking your hand."

She shook it.

"Now, sir, I have one more favor to ask. It is a souvenir of this interview—I wish to take home with me, if I may be so bold as to ask it, a lock of the great commoner's hair."

Old Thad was for a moment more embarrassed than I ever saw him before; then he smiled faintly; he put his hand to his scalp-lock and, lifting his brown wig bodily, laid it upon the table, leaving his pate as bald as a billiard ball. "There is every hair on my head, madame; make your own choice of a lock."

A Man Who Never Forgot His Family.

The departure of a certain gentleman of Muhlenberg County for Arizona last week was an incident in a story about which could be built an interesting romance. Between twenty-five and thirty years ago, when the gentleman was a baby, his father left home to better his fortunes, and went, it was thought, to California. His wife heard nothing from him or of him until he had been gone for three or more years, when she received a check for $500 and requesting her to come to him. She kept the money, as was proper, but declined to make the journey, and he became silent again. Years went by, and the lady, after the proper preliminaries, married again. The gentleman had almost dropped from the minds of his old neighbors, many believing him dead, until a few weeks ago, when he gave another sign of life by sending another check for $500. This time the money was sent to his son, whom he remembered only as "the baby," but who is the father of a family himself now. In his letter he said if his son would come to him in Arizona he would give him a good farm. The young man accepted the offer. The meeting of the old father and "the baby" will doubtless be an interesting one. The gentleman is said to be quite rich now.

Steno-Telegraphy.

Mr. Walter P. Phillips whose system of steno-telegraphy has just been adopted by the Mutual Union Telegraph Company, is rapidly perfecting an automatic system by which, in a test made recently over 500 miles of wire, important results were achieved. Messages were sent through a loop passing through Washington, Pa., received at the office in Washington, D. C., as clearly and quickly as if sent from the one instrument to the other without the intervening distances. Mr. Phillips aims to avoid the perforation of the slips. He transmits from a matrix prepared upon paper slips by a Morse operator, with an ordinary key. This strip is then run through a clock-work arrangement at any desired rate of speed, the result being taken at any station with the same inking apparatus used in steno-telegraphing. A rate of 200 words per minute was easily attained.

They are now telling a story about a Chicago girl who insisted on throwing her shoe after a newly-married couple. The carriage is a total wreck, a doctor has the bride and horse under treatment and large numbers of men are searching the rains for the groom.

A fashion item says: "In many stores devoted to the sale of elegant lingerie is quite a display of Elizabethan and Mary Stuart ruffs." And at a funeral of a prize-fighter the other day was quite a display of New York and Brooklyn roughs.

The Bad Boy draws the Line at Kindling-wood.

"You see," said the Bad Boy to the grocery man, "pa wants me to do all the work around the house. The other day he bought a load of kindling wood, and told me to carry it into the basement. I have not been educated up to kindling wood, and I didn't do it. When supper time came, and pa found that I had not carried in the kindling wood, he had a hot box, and he told me if that wood was not in when he came back from the lodge, that he would warm my jacket. Well, I tried to hire some one to carry it in and take his pay in groceries, and I was going to buy the groceries here and have them charged to pa. But that wouldn't help me out that night. I knew when pa came home he would search for me. So I slept in the back hall on a cot. But I didn't want pa to have all his trouble for nothing, so I borrowed an old tom cat that my chum's old maid aunt owns, and put the cat in my bed. I thought if pa came in my room after me, and found that by his unkindness I had changed to a tom cat he would be sorry. That is the biggest cat you ever see, and the worst fighter in our ward. It isn't afraid of anything, and can whip a Newfoundland dog quicker than you could put sand in a barrel of sugar. Well, about eleven o'clock I heard pa tumble over the kindling wood, and I knew by the remark he made, as the wood slid around under him, that there was going to be a cat fight real quick. He come up to ma's room, and sounded ma as to whether Hennery had retired to his virtuous couch. Pa is awful sarcastic when he tries to be. I could hear him take off his clothes and hear him say, as he picked up a trunk strap; 'I guess I will go up to his room and watch the smile on his face, as he dreams of angels. I yearn to press him to my aching bosom.' I thought to myself, maybe you won't yearn so much directly. He come up stairs, and I could hear him breathing hard. I looked out around the corner and could see he just had on his shirt and pants, and his suspenders were hanging down, and his bald head shone like a calcium light just before it explodes. Pa went in my room, and up to the bed, and I could hear him say, 'Come out here and bring in that kindling wood!' And then there was yowling such as I never heard before, and the furniture in my room began to fall around and break. Oh, my, I think pa took the tom cat right by the neck, the way he does me, and that left all the cat's feet free to get in their work. By the way the cat squawled as though it was being choked, I know pa had him by the neck. I suppose the cat thought pa was a whole flock of New Foundland dogs, and the cat had a record on dogs, and it kicked awful. Pa's shirt was no protection in a cat fight, and the cat just walked all around pa's stomach, and pa yelled 'police' and 'fire,' and 'turn the hose,' and he called ma, and the cat yowled. If pa had had presence of mind enough to have dropped the cat, or rolled it up in the mattress, it would have been all right, but a man always gets rattled in time of danger, and he held onto the cat and started down stairs yelling murder, and he met ma coming up. I guess ma's night cap, or something, frightened the cat some more, cause he stabbed ma with one hind foot, and ma said 'mercy on us,' and she went back, and pa stumbled on a hand sled that was on the stairs, and they all fell down, and the cat got away and went down in the coal bin and yowled all night. Pa and ma went into their room, and I guess they annointed themselves with vaseline, and Pond's extract, and I went and got into my bed, cause it was cold out in the hall, and the cat had warmed my bed as well as it had warmed pa. It was all I could do to go to sleep, with pa and ma talking all night, and this morning I came down the back stairs, and haven't been to breakfast, cause I don't want to see pa when he is vexed. You let the man that carries in the kindling wood have six shillings' worth of groceries and charge them to pa. I have passed the kindling wood period in a boy's life, and have arrived at the coal period. I will carry in coal, but I draw the line at kindling wood."

"Well, you are a cruel, bad boy," said the grocery man, as he went to the book and charged the six shillings.

"O, I don't know. I think pa is cruel. A man who will take a poor kitty by the neck, that hasn't done any harm, and tries to chastise the poor thing with a trunk strap, ought to be looked after by the Humane Society. And if it is cruel to take a cat by the neck, how much more cruel it is to take a boy by the neck, that had diphtheria only a few years ago, and whose throat is tender."—Peck's Sun.

Generosity itself: A man was quietly munching on a piece of pie in a saloon Friday morning when a look of distress suddenly displaced the serene expression on his face. Taking something from between his teeth, and looking at it, he cried to the waiter: "Here, you, there's a stone I found in this pie!" The waiter took it, glanced at it critically, and, handing it back, briefly said: "It's no good to us; you can have it."

"Is your mistress in?" said a caller to the domestic. "She is, sir." "Is she engaged?" asked the caller. "Faith, she is more than that," was Bridget's prompt response; "she's married."

A Hunt in a Horse-Car.

The Result of a Search in the Straw for Some Lost Money.

A Columbia avenue car turned into Franklin street on Saturday morning and began to crawl slowly down town. Pretty soon the car stopped, the conductor reached out and landed an immense basket on the platform and an old woman in a black and white shawl followed it. There was one vacant seat near the forward end of the car and the woman started for it. The passengers eyed the big basket suspiciously as it came into the door and there was a general movement of toes and knees to give it room as it passed up the aisle. There was a general sigh of relief when it settled safely upon the floor against the front door, and the toes and knees crept back again into their comfortable positions.

Presently the old woman in the black and white shawl pulled out her wallet to get her fare. Then she began to hunt in the straw which littered up the car. The attention of a man who sat next to her was attracted right away, and after the hunt had been carried on a moment or two his curiosity got the better of him.

"Did you lose something?"

"Yes, I dropped some money down here."

"Can't you find it?"

"No, I can't find it. It's down here somewhere."

"Let me look," and the man began poking over the straw with his cane. Then a man just across the aisle laid down his paper and watched the proceedings with evident interest.

"Lose something?" he asked.

"Lady lost some money."

"Can't she find it?"

"No; she can't find it."

"Might as well hunt for a needle in a hay mow."

"Yes; can't find nothin' in this straw."

Then a German half way down the car waked up and wanted to know what was the matter.

"Lady lost a ring or something," said the man next to him, who had caught a little of the conversation.

"Vas dot so? Vell, vell; und she don't find it alretty, ain't it?"

"No, she can't find it."

Then a man reading a book near the back platform began to look around, and a colored man, with his mouth wide open and his eyes fastened on the spot, said the woman had dropped a diamond in the straw. The conductor came in and said he wanted his fare.

"I dropped some money down there," said the woman, and the conductor went down on his knees and buried the money deeper than ever in the straw.

"It's money; it ain't a ring," said the man next to the German.

"Yaw, it vas money," said the German to the colored man.

"Dat am money; dat ain't no diamond," said the colored man to the man with the book.

The conductor grew tired of hunting in the straw and said he would like his six cents and went away. The old woman remarked that them conductors was sharks. They jest put down the straw to catch money, and she knowed a conductor what made lots of money by raking over the hay when he got out to the depot. Then the hunt was resumed until Spring Garden street was reached, when the woman said she would have to go.

"Did you find your money?" asked the man with the paper.

"No, I didn't find it," said the woman.

"Didn't she find it?" asked the man with the book, as she passed out to the platform.

"No, she didn't find it," said the colored man.

"Find it?" asked the conductor, as he handed out the big basket.

"No," said the woman, "you can have it."

"How much was it?"

"A penny," and the passengers in the car who had been listening for the reply settled back into their seats and tried to put on an innocent look, just as if they hadn't taken the slightest interest in the thing, anyway.

Only One Way.

Lieutenant Danenhower thinks there is but one way of reaching the Pole. Said he to a Columbus reporter:

"That problem will never be solved until a perfect flying machine is invented. Then it can be done."

"Are you in dead earnest about the flying machine?"

"Most assuredly. It will certainly be produced in time. I think it has been settled beyond a doubt, that it is folly to send a ship in to the ice-locked seas of the North."

"Is there any likelihood of another expedition being organized for an Arctic search?"

"Not in the immediate future. It is not likely that there will be one for years to come—unless the flying maching should develop into a reality."

A Bold Attempt at Robbery.

The Austin mendicant continues to extort admiration from the oldest inhabitant. He loafed about the gate until the proprietor asked him how much he would take to quit the premises.

"All I ask is money enough to buy me a cigar."

The gentleman handed out a nickel.

"Do you want to rob me?" asked the tramp, looking at the nickel.

"What do you mean?"

"It means I am robbed again. I'll have to put another nickel to that one to get me a cigar. I never allow myself to be caught smoking a cigar that costs less than a dime."—Texas Siftings.

It has been stated that there was such a falling off in the sale of the Revised Testament as to greatly disappoint the revisers and publishers. Dr. Schaff, Chairman of the Revision Committee, explains it by saying that "a reaction was sure to come. It is estimated that about 3,000,000 copies of the book have been sold—2,000,000 in England and 1,000,000 in America. That is not a small sale for a book which may be called a new edition of an old work. Another obstacle to its immediate acceptance by the public is, that the work has no sanction authority as yet. The Convention of Canterbury will not pass upon the revision until both testaments are finished. Then it may authorize it, reject it, or recommit to the hands of the revisers for further consideration. At present the Revised Testament has no standing as compared with the authorized version, and, of course, its sale suffers in consequence."

Seriously Speaking.

It is natural for men who love women—they can't help it; but they wouldn't be men if they didn't love themselves the best. If a youth has $5 he is willing to spend 50 cents on his sweetheart, but he wants to spend the other $4.50 on himself. The lesson for girls to learn is, only to demand the half dollar. Seriously speaking, however, a lady of delicate and womanly tastes will not accept expensive presents from gentlemen. If a lady wishes to command the respect and admiration of her gentlemen friends, she will not permit them to spend money unnecessarily on her account. If they are wealthy they will understand her delicacy, if they are poor they will appreciate her thoughtfulness. By accepting only such courtesies as she will be able to return, she can preserve her independence, will place herself under no obligations and will have nothing to regret in future years.

He was Mixed Up.

"Really, but I hope you will excuse the intrusion," said the shabby-looking man as the insurance agent looked up.

"You are excusable, sir. What did you wish?"

"Well—you see—I'm a bit mixed. Was it Napoleon or Washington who crossed the Alps?"

"Napoleon, of course."

"Just so—thank you. I was inclined that way myself, but yet I knew that General Washington was always scooting around, and that he might have taken it into his head to cross the Alps. Good-day, sir."

He passed down the hall thirty feet and then returned and protested:

"Say, don't think ill of me, but I am still a trifle mixed up. Will you answer me one more question?"

"Yes."

"Was it Nero who commanded the sun to stand still?"

"No, it was Joshua."

"I had an idea it was Joshua, but I did not dare put up money on it Very much obliged to you, sir."

This time he went half way down stairs and returned on tip toe. The agent looked up and saw him in the door and sharply inquired:

"Well?"

"Mixed again!" pleaded the stranger. "Say, I want to ask you just one more question."

"Yes."

"Did you ever lend a man a dollar to help him on his way to Columbus to see his dying wife?"

"Never! You are thinking of old Diogenes. He used to shell out to every dead beat who came along."

Mixed again, by thunder!" muttered the man, and as he passed down stairs, he took great pains to set his feet down on each step like a man who had bet on three of a kind and found a flush taking his money.

A Business Secret.

"Are these cakes new maple sugar?" he asked, as he halted before a stand on Wall street.

"They are, sir."

"Made this winter?"

"Yes, sir."

"From the pure sap?"

"The pure sap, sir."

"And not adulterated?"

"Not in the least. How many cakes will you have?"

"Not one. I am looking for some cakes of old maple sugar—some at least a year old. I think new sugar unhealthy."

"I'll tell you what sir," said the keeper of the stand, as he gave his voice a confidential pitch, "if you want six cakes at five cents each, I'll admit I lied about it, and that this is old sugar polished up with a rag. Come, sir, patronize a poor but worthy man."

A story is told about Senator David Davis and a reporter. The latter had called on the Judge to ask for information of such a nature that the very question was an insult to a man of Mr. Davis' character. Looking calmly at him, and slightly bracing himself in his chair, the Judge asked his interlocutor to step to the window and look down. He did so.

"How far is it to the bottom?"

"About thirty feet."

"Well, sir," said Judge Davis, sternly, "do you know what I ought to do with you? I ought to take you, sir, and drop you out at that window, sir, for your impudence in asking such a question. Good day, sir."

HERE AT LAST

After Long and Weary Waiting Relief is Brought to Those Who Need it.

"Well Pat," said an Orange county physician to a complaining Irishman some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when it is too late for me to use it."

When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, its rapid action and sure results, the Capcine is fast displacing the slow-acting plasters of former days, for all affections to which a plaster is applicable. Price, 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York. 15-11-4t

A Gay Young Man.

NEW YORK, March 29.—In October last Charles Reinig, of Yorkville, N. Y., 24 years of age, wooed and won Miss Alice Gallagher, aged 19, who lived with her parents, at No. 1694 First avenue. He soon tired of his young bride, however, and one night in the latter part of December he informed her that he could not love her any longer, and being somewhat impecunious he also told her that he was going to strike out for himself and that she would have to do the best she could. Her tears failed to change his mind, and he started forth to face the cold world alone. She then went home to her mother. Shortly afterward another fair damsel of about 18 summers—Miss Sarah Costello by name—caught the eye of the gallant youth and at the same time captured his heart. One cold night on or about the 9th of January he called at her house, No. 442 East Eighty-second street, vowed that he loved her more dearly than his life, and asked her to fly to Boston with him that very night and become his little wife. The young lady stoutly refused to go with him, but the sight of a huge revolver loaded to the muzzle which he drew from his hip pocket and the threat which accompanied the act, to the effect that if she did not go he would slay her on the spot, or, if not then at the first favorable opportunity, quickly changed her mind, and she hurried up stairs to get on her travelling clothes. The pair went to Boston and were there married on the 11th of January. A few days ago the young man and Mrs. Reinig No. 2 arrived in this city, and the former was arrested on a warrant issued by Justice Murray at the instance of Mrs. Reinig No. 1, who charged him with abandonment.

Dukes Departs.

UNIONTOWN, March 29.—Every one believed all day on Tuesday that Dukes was still in his room in the Jennings house, and his relative, young Hellen, who was staying with him, or pretending to do so, told it around that evening that he was still there and intended to remain. So long as he remained in his room the citizens were perfectly satisfied; but they were determined that he should not parade the streets, and a careful watch was kept on the Jennings property. But it was not careful enough, as the bird had flown before the allotted twenty-four hours was up, and hied away to his mother's house. Yesterday afternoon a gentleman residing in German township was in a certain business house in town, and remarked to several gentlemen who were there: "If Dukes is going to stay in Fayette county I wish he would stay in Uniontown, for we do not want him in German." The whole party was greatly surprised at this remark, for they thought, as did every one else, that he was still in town. The gentleman from the country said he knew what he was talking about and that Dukes had left town on Monday evening shortly after dark. How he made his escape no one can tell, for it was thought that should he venture out at any of the various entrances of the hotel he would be detected. But it must have been at a very early hour in the evening when no one, perhaps, was around. He evidently was not so courageous as he pretended to be, and cared a little more for his life than his cousin, Hellen, said he did.

They are "Frauds."

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The post-office department to-day placed the following names on the list of frauds: William Clinton & Co., and the Comet publishing company, Bloomington, Ill.; Western card company, Normal, Ill.; Union novelty company, Mount Pulaski, Ill.; Star publishing company, Atlanta, Ill.; the Agents' Guide and Guide publishing company, Lincoln, Ill. The postmasters at the places mentioned have been directed to discontinue delivery to these addresses money orders and registered packages.

The Open Treasury.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The committee appointed to examine the cash in the United States treasury and the accounts of the late treasurer began work after the close of business on Saturday by taking account of the teller's cash, so that there need be no interference with the business of the office. The reserve vault was also sealed up preparatory to taking an inventory of the contents as turned over by Gilfillan. It is thought the count will occupy two or three weeks. There has not been a thorough overhauling of the treasurer's office for ten years, the last full examination being made during Treasurer Spinner's time. When Spinner turned over the office to Treasurer New the latter was willing to accept the cash and accounts without examination, and his bondsmen also being willing, the secretary of the treasury dispensed with an examination. The same thing occurred when Treasurer Wyman succeeded New, and when Gilfillan succeeded Wyman. The latter has expressed his willingness to forego an examination on the present occasion but the secretary thinks that so long a time has intervened since the last count, that one should now be made. The committee will be assisted in the work by a force of twenty or thirty clerks detailed from offices other than the treasurer's office. A count will be made of the old notes in the redemption division, new notes in the reserve vault, the silver and gold, and bonds held in trust. President Upton, of the committee, has decided that an actual count must be made in all cases. The packages of notes will be opened and counted, as will also be the bags of gold and silver coin. He will personally assume charge of the work of comparing the cash on hand with the treasurer's accounts and with the accounts of the disbursing officers.

Immense Steel Mill to be Built.

ST. LOUIS, March 30.—A number of St. Louis and New York capitalists have organized a company to erect and operate an immense steel mill at Gunnison, Col., and have already commenced work. They have purchased two thousand acres of coal lands at Crystal Butte, twenty miles from Gunnison, containing five veins of an aggregate thickness of twenty eight feet. This is the finest anthracite coal, and makes coke superior to the best manufactured in Pennsylvania. The same land also contains immense deposits of iron ore, equal to the best in Missouri, and yielding sixty to seventy per cent. iron. The company will have three hundred men at work before the end of the year, and next year when their steel mill is finished they expect to employ several hundred hands. They think they have an advantage which will enable them to produce steel rails cheaper than they are made anywhere else in this country. It is believed they will have a ready market for all they can make.

Mrs. Meaker Hanged.

WINDSOR, Vt., March 30.—Mrs. Emeline L. Meaker was hanged today. She protested her innocence to the last.

Little Alice Meaker, the innocent victim of Mrs. Meaker's fiendish depravity, was a pauper on the town of South Burlington, Vt., and had been placed with Mrs. Meaker and her husband for support. Mrs. Meaker tormented the child so that her life was a burden, and finally resolved to murder her. In a carriage or a lonely road near Waterbury, Vt., on the night of April 23, 1882, Almon, her son, prepared a dose of strychnine and sweetened water, and this monster of a mother held it to the lips of little Alice and made her drink it. She died there in the carriage in terrible convulsions, and then the mother and son buried the victim's body in a swamp. The next Monday the son showed the sheriff where the body was buried and made a confession.

The Funeral of Hon. T. O. Howe.

GREEN BAY, Wis., March 29.—The remains of Postmaster General Howe arrived here early this morning and were taken to his late residence at 10:30 o'clock. The bells in the city tolled sixty-seven strokes, the age of the deceased, and the casket was borne to the Presbyterian church which was crowded long before the hour for the funeral. After services by Revs. L. J. White and H. M. Simmons the remains were taken to the cemetery where, after the reading of the Presbyterian burial service, the coffin was lowered into the grave. Miss Grace Howe, a niece of Judge Howe, was overcome by emotion. She was tenderly cared for and soon recovered. Each of the pall-bearers passed around the grave and dropped on the coffin a small boquet.

Senator Cameron's Health.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Senator Cameron now drives out every day and transacts some business in his office. He is looking extremely well considering the pain and suffering he has been subjected to during the past months. He is not strong enough to receive visitors, his nervous system being much shattered. He is longing for a few days at Harrisburg, and may go there now at any time. He will return to the city and remain until his departure for Europe, which will be about the latter part of May. He will be accompanied by his wife and children.

More Bodies Recovered.

BRAIDWOOD, Illinois, March 30.—Seven more bodies were discovered to-day on the upper timbers, where they probably crowded thinking they could escape the flood. They can only be handled by shoveling them up in bags.

European Events.

PARIS, March 30.—Louis Michel was arrested this morning on the charge of entering bakers' shops at the head of an armed band and plundering them.

LONDON, March 30.—A matrimonial alliance has been arranged between Hugh Northcote, son of Sir Stafford Northcote, and Miss Edith, daughter of ex-Secretary Hamilton Fish, of New York.

The police are in receipt of a letter purporting to emanate from Fenian sources, threatening that unless the men charged with the Phœnix Park murder, and now confined in the Kilmainham jail awaiting trial, are at once released, the Central telegraph office in London will be blown up.

Although the queen will not quit Windsor Castle for Osborne until the end of next week, she took carriage exercise to day, as was her practice before the accident. She is fast recovering in health, and now experiences scarcely any inconvenience. As a precautionary measure, orders have been issued that the passage which underlies the residence of Gladstone shall hereafter be closed at sunset.

An Expert Swindler Arrested.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Robert C. Ballard alias Henry C. Bullard alias W. C. Rusell, alias Henry C. Waltby, was arrested to-day. He is one of the most expert swindlers in this country. In addition to his thievery he is a bigamist, having three known wives. His method of operation was to make a deposit of a worthless check and get a certificate of deposit and on its strength have checks cashed for amounts varying from $100 to $500. He is wanted in Tarrytown, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington. Years ago he married a well connected southern lady with whom he came north. Here she died and Ballard having some knowledge of medicine, began to practice as a physician. He commenced his criminal career by forging a friend's name to a check for $200. One of his wives lives in Poughkeepsie, and the other two here. He was caught while going to visit his last wife. So much was his arrest desired that the Bankers' association of this city offered $1,000 for his apprehension.

Will get His Salary.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Comptroller Laurance has rendered a decision that the salary for Congressman Ochiltree, of Texas, must be paid to himself, notwithstanding his indebtedness to the United States, on the ground that his office is a constitutional one and that if his salary was withheld he would be deprived of the means of supporting the representation of his constituents. Territorial delegates, however, are not constitutional officers, and it is held in their cases their indebtedness to the government can be set off against their salaries.

An Old Opera House Burned.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 1.—The old Augusta opera house, owned by W. P. Moore, of Philadelphia, was destroyed by fire early this morning. Ben Niess' saloon, together with the stock, was also destroyed. The stock of M. M. Hill & Co., Printers, was damaged by water. The loss is $25 000; insurance, $10,000. James Davis and J. Fox, firemen, who were on an adjoining building, were struck by a stream of water, the former being knocked into the burning building and the latter thrown to the street. Both were seriously injured.

Charged with Corruption.

LONDON, March 29.—The Daily News' correspondent at Varna says a secret report has been presented to the Sultan, in which it is charged that several of the Turkish ministers and high officials of the government had entered into an arrangement by which they were to receive bribes in connection with the collection of tobacco taxes. The ministers accused tendered their resignations, but the Sultan refused to accept them. Much uneasiness exists in regard to the matter.

An Editor Cowhided.

ST. LOUIS, March 28.—J. N. Peers, editor of the Collinsville (Ill.) Herald, was publicly horsewhipped in that town yesterday by Mrs. Henry Marshall, wife of a well-known business man, for the publication of an article which reflected upon herself, her husband and her mother. Peers was badly marked about the face and neck by a heavy rawhide vigorously applied by the outraged lady.

Don't belong to the Dynamite Party

DUBLIN, March 28.—A meeting of a committee of the Irish National League was held to-day. Timothy D. Sullivan, member of parliament for West Meath, presided. He repudiated the charge that the league was connected with the Irish dynamite party in America. O'Donovan Rossa and Sir William Harcourt, home secretary, he said, must fight their own battles.

Why He Committed Suicide.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., March 28.—Herman Neumann, a prominent merchant of St. Clair, commited suicide to-day by hanging himself in his stable. He was a widower, and the opposition of his daughters to his marrying and the commencement of proceedings for breach of promise incited him to self-destruction.

Store and Dwelling Burned.

SCRANTON, March 30.—The store and dwelling of W. H. Hollister, at Pleasant valley, was burned last night. Loss, $17,000. Mr. Luce, a clerk, narrowly escaped and lost his furniture valued at $1,000. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp.

After a Dead Man's Shoes.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The president has not yet taken any action in regard to the vacancy in his cabinet caused by the death of Postmaster General Howe and it may be stated by authority that such action will not be taken before next week. A delegation from Ohio, consisting of General Grosvenor, M. Briggs Cunningham and M. W. T. Lippincott, called upon the president this afternoon and urged upon him the importance of having in his cabinet a representative. Butterworth, of Ohio, also had an interwiew with the president to-day.

The Result of Jumping from a Train.

EASTON, Pa., April 1.—Four boys jumped from a train at the mouth of the tunnel on the Easton and Amboy railroad, near Pattenburg, N. J., this morning and were struck by a locomotive coming in an opposite direction. Warren Barrigan, aged 17 years, was cut in two and another boy was seriously injured. The others escaped.

A Meeting to be Called.

NEW YORK, March 28.—In accordance with Judge Freedman's decision in the case of Reiff vs. the Western Union telegraph company as to the advisability of the stockholders and directors of the companies ratifying leases, a large number of Western Union stockholders to-day decided to call a meeting to ratify the action of the directors in connection with the lease of the Mutual Union company by the Western Union.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL NEWS

Death of Mr. Samuel Potter.

The fact that Mr. Samuel Potter expired very suddenly at the house of his son-in-law, Mr. Abram V. Miller, of Pleasant Gap, on Saturday morning last, was chronicled in the NEWS of that day; and proved to be very startling to the public and the many friends of the deceased. The old gentleman was in the full enjoyment of his usual excellent health and on the evening previous to his death was noticed to be even more cheerful than on ordinary occasions. He was a very intelligent gentleman and a deep reader, Ancient History being his principal subject, in which he was well "booked." He would entertain the company that assembled at Mr. Miller's residence with the interesting incidents of very early times, and his son-in-law, Senator C. T. Alexander, of this place, frequently consulted him on subjects to which he did not care to give the time for personal investigation. On Friday evening he remained up until a reasonably late hour chatting and joking in a very felicitous vein. On Saturday morning a member of the household arose at an early hour and entered Mr. Potter's sleeping apartment. The old gentleman was observed to be alive then as he coughed slightly and turned over in his bed, and his condition was such as to attract no attention. Shortly after that his daughter, Mrs. Miller, also entered the apartment. The fact that her father was lying so very quiet and that she could not hear him breathe startled her and she examined more closely, discovering that life had silently fled and that he was lying in the repose of death, which was doubtless caused by an attack of apoplexy. The deceased was about 85 years of age. He leaves eight children—five boys and three girls. The funeral was held at Mr. Miller's residence at Pleasant Gap on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

—Brevity is the soul of wit, therefore, we shall be brief. It does not require circumlocution to invite our friends to purchase groceries of Sechler & Co., and, considering the merits of the establishment, it should not require much urging to induce them to do so.

—The Centre Hall Reporter records the following changes of residence: Thomas J. Decker from Potter's Mills to Lock Haven; Jas. H. Bitner from Pleasant Gap to Tusseyville; J. W. O. Housman from Pleasant Gap to Rebersburg; Daniel Prutzman from upper end of Miles township to Centre Hall; Philip Kemp from Centre Hill to Pleasant Gap; L. Wynn from Centre Hall to Potter's Mills; James Caldren from Centre Hall to Montgomery Station; G. H. Homan from Centre Hill to Spring Mills.

An organization of the policy holders of Lycoming Fire Insurance Company, in Centre county and vicinity, has been effected for the purpose of resisting the payment of the recent exorbitant assessments made thereon by the company, until the legal liability of the policy holders to pay is judicially determined. A New Pastor.

The M. E. churches at Milesburg and Unionville have a new pastor in the person of Rev. W. W. Reese who was sent to them by the late Conference of the church. He filled his appointment at the two places on Sunday. His sermon at Milesburg was an exceptionally fine one and was well received by the congregation which was larger than usual, all the members of the church and many visitors assembling to listen to him. His pastoral work of Sunday showed that he is an intelligent and highly educated gentleman and that he also possesses those rare qualities of mind and heart that will make him popular out of as well as in the pulpit. He has an accomplished and very pleasant family, and their residence in Milesburg will prove agreeable and profitable to all the residents of that borough.

He has entered upon the work at Milesburg under unusually favorable circumstances. His efficient and much-esteemed predecessor, Rev. J. A. Woodcock, who has been transferred to Chambersburg, left his work at Unionville and Milesburg followed by the respect of both congregations. He and his family will always be remembered by them with kindly regard. Not a dollar of debt of any kind is now resting upon the Milesburg church. On Sunday morning, March 25th—the last Sunday of Rev. Woodcock's pastorate—a collection of over $115 was lifted which was sufficient to defray every cent of obligation against the congregation. We hope the pleasant auspices under which the new pastor's work is begun may continue to grow brighter.

—Sechler's store continues to be the best place to purchase groceries.

—Williams Brothers, paper hangers and house decorators, have recently made material and artistic improvements in the interior of their store rooms. They are excellent workmen and have put themselves in possession of means to supply their customers with all the late styles and patterns known to the city trade. It is said that a certain prominent gentleman of the town some time ago incurred the expense of a journey to the city to select elaborate paper decorations for the interior of his residence and hired city workmen to come and put them on. Then to his chagrin and surprise he discovered that our home firm had precisely the same decorations in stock and could put them on with equal and perhaps greater skill at several hundred dollars less expense.

—March is ended, but there is still an opportunity to march to Harry Teats & Co.'s store in quest of groceries.

Revived and Refurnished.

Mr. E. Brown, late proprietor of the Madison House at Madisonburg, this county, has just taken charge of what has long been known as the Cummings House, in this place. The house has been thoroughly overhauled throughout, and every convenience possible is being provided. Mr. Brown has had a number of years experience in the hotel business and has ever been attended with marked success. The traveling public can well afford to give the Cummings House, under its new management, a trial. Permanent boarding will be furnished at reasonable rates, while the transient custom will also meet with all possible attention.

—The name of Harry Green's cigar is becoming famous near and far.

—We caution those who changed their places of residence not to make the mistake which a well known gentleman has already done, of returning for their meals to their former place of abode. The mistake made by the gentleman in question wasn't exactly that, but was equally ridiculous. He entered the house next to his new place of abode and went as far as the sitting room where some ladies were sitting before he discovered his mistake. He retired with profuse apologies.

—Have you been to the bargain sale at the Bee Hive? If not, get there as soon as you can. 15-10tf

—A reporter of this paper considers a pleasant incident of his recent visit to Snow Shoe his meeting with Mr. Charles Archey, brother-in law of Mr. Samuel Boyer. Charley has a vivid recollection of days long past when he and the reporter attended school at the Bellefonte Academy then taught by Miss Betsey Blakeley, who is remembered with feelings of the greatest respect by so many of our citizens whose ideas she first taught to shoot, bud and blossom.

CAST SCRAP IRON WANTED.—Will pay cash or exchange for hardware at H. K. Hicks' hardware and stove store. dawtf

—Buttoning the sealskin up to her chin,
She glideth out and she glideth in,
And the eyes of woman with envy are green;
But the erst young fellow is seldom seen,
For in the dark office he labors like sin
For the fairy who tied and roped him in.

—The loud winds dwindled to a whisper low and said that for cheap groceries we must go to Harry Teats & Co.

—How many warm days make a summer?

School Entertainment.

Spring District School No. 5, known as Weaver's school, closed last week, giving a very enjoyable entertainment on Friday evening. As usual in such entertainments, the exercises consisted of readings, dialogues, recitations, essays, etc., with a few jig dances and negro specialties interspersed. The house was crowded with an audience that went into transports of delight and applauded each exercise to the echo. The jig dances and negro specialties were especially excellent, most of them being executed by a precocious youth named Kane. Mr. James Brooks is the teacher, and the literary exercises which formed a large part of the entertainment showed that the school has advanced in scholarship under his training.

—Truth is mighty and must prevail. It is the truth that the meat sold at Sechler's mammoth combined grocery store and meat market excels in all the qualities for which the best meat is known. Call and purchase and be convinced.

—A Danville, Pa., dispatch says that the new Memorial Protestant Episcopal church, one of the finest edifices in that part of the State, erected in memory of the late Peter Baldy, who bequeathed $50,000 for the purpose, was consecrated on Wednesday, the 28th, by Rt. Rev. W. A. DeWolfe Howe, D. D. L. L. D., assisted by Rev. Alfred Louderback, D. D., of Chicago, Rev. John Hewitt, of Bellefonte, and others. Rev. Dr. Clare, of Philipsburg, was also in attendance. Rev. G. F. Breed was installed rector.

—Rich, rare and juicy meats at Sechler's meat market.

—Historian Bancroft once published a volume of poems of which he is now not at all proud. The little book was issued in 1826 and copies of it are hard to find. At a recent sale a copy sold for forty dollars. The purchaser wrote to Mr. Bancroft: "Can I secure other copies?" By return mail he received the reply: "Plenty at the same price."

Scientific Miscellany.

Excavations have been commenced at Fel-el-Maskhute, in Egypt, on the supposed site of Raamses, one of the two cities specified in the first chapter of Exodus as built by the forced labor of the Hebrews. It is hoped that inscriptions may be discovered at this place which will enable Egyptologists to identify the Pharaoh of Moses, to assign a dynastic date to the period of the oppression, and to settle the much disputed question regarding the route of the Exodus. Funds are being raised in England for prosecuting this important exploration.

The plan of disposing of the sewerage of Berlin by applying it as a fertilizer to farms near the city has proven much less satisfactory than was expected. Not only have the farming operations been unprofitable, but the health of the inhabitants has been endangered by noxious vapore arising from sewage saturated land.

Prof. Koch has severely criticised the experiments of Pasteur on anthrax disease, and contends that the value of the process of protective vaccination which has been so extensively introduced in France has been greatly over estimated by hasty and unscientific conclusions.

A small balloon, having a capacity of about two gallons, is reported to have traveled from Bercy, France, to Grodno in Poland—a distance of more than 2,000 miles. This is the longest air trip on record for so small an object.

The Belgian Academy offers a prize of $600 for the best treatise on the destruction of fish by the pollution of rivers sent in before Oct. 1, 1885.

From three stations in northern Europe systematic observations and measurements of the aurora borealis have been made throughout the winter, and one of the observers at least—Prof. Tromholt—confidently expects that the comparison of the results which will soon be made will establish with considerable exactness the height above the earth at which phenomenon occurs, thus solving another perplexing problem of science. Prof. Tromholt has attempted several times to photograph the aurora, but has failed to get a trace of an image upon even the most sensitive plates.

Prof. Graber, of Czernowitz, Austria, has made a long series of experiments concerning the "skin-vision" of animals, and has proven that certain species having no visual organs proper—such as the earth-worm are not only able to distinguish between different quanties of light, but also manifest a decided preference for light of certain colors.

Among the objects of the Swedish Arctic expedition are the exploration of the interior of Greenland, and a search for remains of the Norsemen whose settlements existed in that country from about the year 1000 to the end of the fourteenth century, and of whose ultimate fate little or nothing is known. It is expected that the expedition will start in May, under the command of Baron Nordenskjold.

At the age of 97, Mons. Chevreul, the eminent French chemist, can look back over an active scientific career of probably greater length than has fallen to the lot of any other man; and in a late address to the French Academy he had occasion to refer to a communication he had made to that body nearly 71 years before.

Dr. William Thomson, of Melbourne, shows by statistics that the mortality from consumption is increasing in Victoria, the deaths having been 11.49 to each 10,000 inhabitants in 1871 and 13.90 in 1881. He believes that the disease was imported into the colony from a broad, and contends that consumption is never induced by conditions of the atmosphere or soil, but is due to a specific parasitic poison. Consumptives derive benefit from sea-voyages because they are constantly exposed to an atmosphere unfavorable to the development of the parasites.

The attention of several observers has been drawn to the prevalence of partial deafness among pupils in schools. The researches of Dr. Gelle, who has had excellent opportunities for studying the ear in young persons and who has met with 1400 cases of deafness among scholars, indicate that the hearing of twenty or twenty-five per cent of the children is weakened so far as to affect their understanding of lessons. This infirmity has not been understood, and the afflicted ones appeared dull and backward, while their proper education suffers. To overcome as far as possible the effects of imperfect hearing, Dr. Gelle suggests that the teacher should keep well in sight and speak slowly and distinctly; that school-rooms should be away from disturbing sounds, while stoves or hot-air currents should not be placed in the centre of classes; and that pupils should be seated with reference to their hearing power, the deafest being placed nearest the teacher.

In one particular instance which he has investigated, Herr Kultzleb has found that the failure of a clover crop was caused by a deficiency of easily soluble potash in the soil, and not by parasites or a lack of nitrogen or of water.

—Gortschakoff was vain of his facility for writing dispatches and conquering female affections. He fancied that his sons divided an inheritance of his powers. Whenever a lady with whom he had been flirting left St. Petersburg, it was the custom to ask the Prince when she would return, in order to receive the invariable reply: "I cannot say; she is no longer under the fascinating glance of my eyes." The absurdity of the answer was heightened by the fact that the Prince had saucer eyes, as dull as those of a codfish, and that these watery orbs were covered by spectacles.

Manitoba may be a good summer resort; but when the thermometers freeze in stove ovens it is not a good place to spend the winters.

—While nosing about among the second hand book stores in Philadelphia, in 1839, Dr. Landis, of Danville, Ky., picked up for a few shillings an old volume, printed on vellum, and dated 1490. This was a copy of the works of Anselm, the great chemist and celebrated physician of the fourteenth century, who is more generally known as Paracelsus. Dr. Landis did not suspect the full value of his prize until he found that among the contents was the long-lost and much-disputed letter of the great chemist, which had for years been the subject of controversy in literary and scientific circles. Not daring to trust even his own keen judgment upon so important a matter, he sent the book to the British Museum. It was found to be genuine, and he was at once offered $5,000 for the work. This offer was declined, and Dr. Landis kept the book until his death, a few weeks ago, and willed the volume to the Central University, a Presbyterian school at Richmond, Ky. The book would now probably bring $10,000 at public sale, and is one of the most valuable volumes in the world.

"Yes," said the captain of the ocean steamship, "we had a very expensive trip this time. Very little sea sickness; passengers ate frightfully."

EDITOR'S TABLE.

No series ever published in THE CENTURY has attracted more attention, or exerted a wider influence, than Dr Washington Gladden's three recent papers on "The Christian League of Connecticut." In view of the interest manifested, both in America and England, the author has written for the May CENTURY a supplementary chapter, describing the third annual convention of the League, in which reports were read from the county societies and a general discussion took place of the workings of the League in different localities. It would seem that the reforms accomplished by the League throughout the State were brought about in the face of many serious practical difficulties. How these difficulties were overcome Dr. Gladden tells in the supplementary essay.

D., 1883, to me directed, for holding a court of Over and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and Quarter Sessions of the peace in Bellefonte, for the County of Centre, and to commence on the fourth Monday of April, being the 23d day of April, 1883, and to continue two weeks, notice is hereby given to the Coroner, Justices of the Peace, Aldermen and Constables of said County of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, with their records, inquisitions, examinations, and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their office appertains to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the jail of Centre county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

Dorsey's Testimony.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—After the recess in the star route trial today Stephen W. Dorsey came into the court room for the first time since the beginning of the present trial. At the conclusion of the testimony of the witness who was then under examination Mr. Dorsey was called to the stand. When about to take the oath Merrick asked if he regarded the oath as binding upon his conscience. Fiercely shaking his finger at the gentleman the witness answered that an oath was as binding upon him as upon Mr. Merrick. He regarded it as binding upon his conscience. Merrick then asked the witness if he had in mind the effect of the failure to observe the oath upon a future state of reward and punishment. Ingersoll here jumped to his feet and interposed an objection, and then proceeded to pour out an impassioned discourse on the theology, in the course of which he denounced laws which prevented a man from acting as a witness because he did not believe as some other men did or some holy book taught. The court declined to go into the theological question, but decided that Dorsey was competent, as a witness because he was a defendant, and that if he swore falsely he could be punished for perjury. Dorsey was then sworn and his examination was begun. He was visibly agitated and in some instances scarcely waited for the conclusion of the question before answering. In response to questions he said he never entered into any agreement or conspiracy with Brady, John Dorsey or any one else to defraud the government by bidding for mail contracts; never had a transaction with General Brady and never paid nor promised to pay him a cent for his influence or for any purpose whatever. In regard to Rerdell's statement that "Smith stood on the books for Brady" the witness said the name of "Smith" never appeared on his books. His examination was concluded when court adjourned.

Indian Warfare.

ST. LOUIS, March 27.—A Muskogee, Indian Territory, special says: General Porter has disbanded his forces, and they have gone home, with the exception of a few scouts, leaving the United States troops to capture Spieche and his men. At last accounts they had not reached his camp, fifteen miles west of the Sac and Fox agency. No doubt he will surrender to them without resistance, as he would have done to the Creeks had he not been afraid he would have gone the way of Sleeping Rabbit, who was killed while trying to escape last Wednesday. A detachment of Thorp's army discovered Spieche's scouts and gave chase, capturing one. They questioned him as to the Spieche's whereabouts and forces, but as he would tell nothing, they took him out and shot him dead. There are rumors here of more killing on the same plan, but nothing authentic. News reached here last night of another killing near Eufala last week. About twenty Chicote men left that place and they discovered a Spieche man named Echoely Harge and without more ado riddled him with bullets.

The Globe's Arizona special says a man was killed near Stein's Pass, New Mexico, a short distance from the Arizona line, yesterday by two Apache Indians. It is supposed he was killed to prevent his giving information as to the direction in which they were moving. The news was brought to Tucson by a passenger on the western-bound express, which arrived at Tucson last evening

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—A Richmond, N. M., special gives intelligence of the killing of two men, making a total of nine white men killed in the vicinity of Richmond during the past twenty-four hours.

The Final Resting Place.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—The remains of John Howard Payne arrived in this city shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning. W. W. Corcoran and Undertaker Gamler were at the depot to receive them. Mr. C. M. Matthews and Lieutenant Nicholson, who had accompanied the remains from New York, stepped from the train and greeted Mr. Corcoran. The undertaker, with the assistance of some of the railroad employes, lifted out the coffin, which was enclosed in a wedge-shaped, foreign-looking box of wood, heavily bound at the sides and corners with straps of wrought iron. On each side were three iron handles. The box was covered with a black pall and draped with an American flag. It was borne at once to the hearse, followed by Mr. Corcoran and his two representatives, and, taking carriages, the entire party accompanied the remains to Oak Hill and saw the coffin placed in the chapel.

Destroying a Bridge.

PHILADELPHIA, March 28.—A dispatch at midnight from the Nicetown sub-police station announced that a gang of three hundred men, supposed to be in the employ of the Reading railroad, were congregated there destroying the new bridge of the Pennsylvania railroad company at Second and Venango streets.

Honoring the Dead.

KENOSHA, Wis., March 28.—Many strangers arrived on the morning train and the town is draped in mourning. A Chicago special train bearing several hundred persons, among them the Washington delegation, arrived about 2 o'clock. Secretaries Lincoln, Teller, Chandler, Frelinghuysen and Acting Postmaster General Frank Hatton and a delegation from the postoffice department composed the Washington party. A light snow storm prevailed. The body was at the residence of Colonel J. H. Howe, about two miles from town. The hour set for the funeral services was 3 o'clock, but before that time the remains were borne by the citizens of Kenosha organized as an escort to the Unitarian church, where they lay in state. A bust of the dead statesman was exposed to view and closely and tearfully scrutinized by the vast concourse. The decorations at the church were simple and entirely floral in character. The services were opened with a chant by the Chicago quartette. This was followed by scriptural reading by Rev. H. M. Simmons and an invocation by Rev. Robert Collier, of New York, was followed by the singing of the hymn, "Abide With Me." Rev. Mr. Simmons eulogized the character of the deceased with whom he had been closely associated for many years. "Oh, Spirit Freed From Earth," was sung by the quartette and Rev. Dr. Collier then spoke on the hopes of immortality. The service closed with a selection by the quartette, and the benediction pronounced. The congregation then viewed the remains, after which the casket was given into the hands of the pallbearers, Chief Justice Call, Governor Rusk, Secretary Lincoln, Secretary Teller, Horace Rublee, Senator Sawyer, F. H, Hatton and Senator Hill and taken to the depot and placed aboard the funeral train, which left for Green Bay about 4 p. m.

State Legislation.

HARRISBURG, March 27.—The house this afternoon passed finally bills as follows: For the incorporation and regulation of mutual assessment corporations for the insurance of lives; fixing the districts of the supreme court; to prevent the exemption of property on judgments obtained for fifty dollars or less for wages for manual labor; for repeal of the vagabond act of February 21, 1767 (it does not affect the act of 1879). The bill prohibiting political assessments passed third reading.

HARRISBURG, March 28.—In the senate this afternoon the bill giving an appeal to the supreme court from special injunctions granted by the orphans' court passed finally. The consideration of the Philadelphia charter bill was then resumed, and an amendment was passed that the director of the public works shall be chosen by a plurality of votes cast at the election, and shall hold office for four years from the first Monday of April next succeeding the election. The bill as amended passed third reading.

The time in the house was consumed on appropriation bills on second reading. Those passed were $31,000 for Dixmont; $5,000 to pay the expenses of investigating the mining laws of the state; $71,000 for the western penitentiary; $178,500 to the state insane hospital at Norristown; $200,000 for the state industrial home at Huntingdon; $60,000 to the Warren insane hospital. The vote on the bill extending the provisions of the general license law of Allegheny county was reconsidered, and the house adjourned.

A Foe to the Salvationists.

EASTON, March 27.—Rev. Father Dillon, pastor of St. Bernard's church, on Sunday, warned his congregation against the practice of attending the meetings of the Salvation army. He said that certain young and foolish people had been in the habit of going to these meetings—he could not call them "devotional meetings"—and the warnings of their parents and their admonitions seemed to be of no avail. He intended, he said, to adopt such measures as would put a stop to a practice which could only be productive of evil to those who attended, and was opposed to the principles of true religion as taught by the church. He gave those who were alluded to one week to consider their foolish conduct, he said, and after that time those who attended these Salvation army meetings would be denied absolution.

The Fatal Flames.

PITTSBURG, March 28.—This morning, at 4 o'clock, a frame house in Allegheny city, owned and occupied by Edward Graham, was destroyed by fire. Two twin boys, aged 15 months, the children of David Faulkner, who lived in two of the rooms, were cremated. The loss to buildings and household goods is $1,000; fully insured.

PERU, Ind., March 28.—S. Fegley, an aged farmer, living alone in Butler township, was burned to death on Monday night while trying to save his money in a trunk in the garret of his burning house. The body was found in the ashes of the house.

Conkling Discharged from Custody

NEW YORK, March 27.—After hearing arguments on the shooting of Haverstick by Conkling on the 19th instant Police Justice Smith to-day decided that there was reasonable grounds for the defendant apprehending grievous bodily harm at the hands of the deceased and discharged Conkling from custody. The announcement was received with tumultuous applause from the spectators.

Paper Manufacturers Fail.

PITTSBURG, March 26.—C. P. Markle & Sons, of this city, the largest paper manufacturers in Western Pennsylvania, have made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to Jesse H. Lippincott, of this city, without preferences. Their liabilities are about $400,000 and their assets nearly $1,000,000. Heavy failures in the west, the general depression of trade and unprofitable investments caused the failure.

The failure was precipitated by Captain C. C. Markle, one of the firm, absconding on Thursday last and taking with him from $60,000 to $100,000 of the firm's money. Twelve thousand dollars of this was intended to pay the hands with at West Newton and Markleton.

A despatch from West Newton says the news of the failure created intense excitement there and the streets were crowded with excited people expressing indignation at the way the employes have been treated. Notices were posted to-night that the employes would be paid on the 30th instant.

Pittsburg's Latest Sensation.

PITTSBURG, March 27.—The failure of C. P. Markle & Sons, paper manufacturers, was the principal topic in commercial circles to day. As previously stated, the liabilities are about $400,000 and the assets close to $1,000,000. Mr. Krider, chief book keeper, followed Captain Markle to Chicago by request of the latter's brother, and succeeded without much difficulty in persuading him to make an assignment. Markle offered no explanation of his conduct beyond stating that he was tired and wanted rest. He had been drinking and was still under the influence of liquor. He made no offer to return the money although acquainted with the fact that his action had ruined the firm. As the money is his own it cannot be taken from him in any legal way and for that reason no proceedings will be instituted against him. As near as can be learned he took with him $60,000 of the firm's money.

The Pall Bearers.

MILWAUKEE, March 27.—The following gentlemen will act as pall bearers at the funeral of the late Postmaster General Howe: Chief Justice Cole, Governor Rush, Secretary Lincoln, Secretary Teller, Horace Ruble, of the Milwaukee Sentinel, Senator Sayer and Frank M. Hatton. Rev. R. Collier and Rev. H. M. Simons are expected to act as officiating clergymen. A plaster cast of Postmaster General Howe's face was taken yesterday evening. Expressions of sympathy were received from President Arthur, Secretary Frelinghuysen, N. D. Sperry, Frank Hatton, Senator Angus Cameron, Attorney General Brewster and others.

Dissatisfied Engineers.

CHICAGO, March 28.—An order having been issued by the Nickle-Plate road requiring engineers to work twelve instead of ten hours, the engineers employed on this end of the line ran their locomotives in the round house and quit work. Nearly forty engines were abandoned. The company have large contracts in hand for immediate shipment of freight, and embarrassment is likely to result. It is intimated a compromise may be reached to-day.

Dukes Must Go.

PITTSBURGH, March 26.—A Uniontown special to the Chronicle, of this city, says that N. L. Dukes arrived at Uniontown from his stepfather's last night and this morning a committee of citizens waited on him and presented him with the resolutions adopted at the indignation meeting held there. They also gave him notice that he would have twenty-four hours to transact his business and leave the town. If he attempts to remain it is feared there will be trouble.

Mill Shuts Down.

MILWAUKEE, March 25.—The puddle mill at Bayview, which was run for three weeks, is now closed for two or three weeks until the accumulated stock of puddled iron is reduced. It is said if the mill is kept running on half time it is as much as can be expected for some time to come, as there are more furnaces running in the mill than the demand for iron warrants.

Deaths from Diphtheria.

QUEBEC, March 26.—Diptheria is prevalent at Nicdlet and a large number of children have fallen victims to the disease. A few fatal cases are reported in this city.

"OH, HOW MY BACK ACHES!"—How often we hear it said. Well may the victim complain, for the kidneys are suffering; and when that is the case there is always danger—great danger. Kidney diseases, if let run, too often end fatally. There is, however, a sure cure for them. Hunt's Remedy is a medicine that does not fail to cure kidney, bladder, liver and urinary complaints. Even Bright's Disease, the terror of physicians, is cured by Hunt's Remedy, the great kidney and liver medicine. Try it, and cure your back-ache before it terminates in something worse.

Heavy Snow in North Carolina.

PETERSBURG, Va., March 26.—A heavy snow storm has been raging all day south of Weldon, N. C. At points along the Raleigh and Gaston railroad the snow is reported to have fallen to a depth of ten inches. The northern-bound mail and passenger train from the south was three hours late this afternoon. Jay Gould and family passed through here this afternoon for New York from Jacksonville, Fla.

General Beaver's Talk on "How to Get a Home and How to Keep it."

One of the largest audiences that has assembled in the hall of the Y. M. C. A. to listen to any of the lectures in connection with the free course greeted General Beaver on Tuesday evening, the 27th ult, and gave close attention to his remarks on the above topic.

At the outset the speaker stated that he had hoped a larger proportion of his audience would be made up of such as had no homes and were consequently to a great extent dependent. His object was to arouse these to a greater appreciation of the importance of every man having his own home because, first, it adds to his independence of a landlord, of his employer and, to a limited extent, independence of labor or drudgery. Secondly, it makes of him a better citizen. A man owning property becomes thereby interested in the welfare of his community, he looks after the affairs of the community and takes part in the management of those affairs. Thirdly, it adds to the man's importance from a legal, a social and a commercial standpoint. Owning a home tends to a man's happiness and that of his family. A man will find profitable and pleasant occupation for his leisure hours in and about his home. What is the reason rented houses always look so cheerless? A man who rents a property will not take that pride in improving it which would be natural if it belonged to him. Within, the walls are not papered, beautified and made attractive; without, fences are not repaired, shade and fruit-trees are not planted for some one's else benefit. The man and his family improve the interior and exterior for his own benefit and comfort. If they are not to be there next year, what matters these things? Then a home furnishes a rallying point for the family after the husband and father is dead.

How can every man own his own home? The laborer pays rent. In some way make this rent a part payment on the property. The man earnestly desiring his own home will be frugal in living and judicious in expenditures. The discipline and habits acquired in securing the home will not only procure the home, but will add to its comforts. The law helps a man to retain his home and many a widowed mother has realized the benefits of the homestead exemption law.

The audience was in full sympathy with the speaker and for the first time in the whole course, this being the fifth lecture, gave a hearty cheer when the General concluded.

Local Miscellany.

A telephonic dispatch tells us that a desperate fight occurred between five and six o'clock on Monday evening of last week among the Hungarian railroadists employed near Glenn Harris. Some of them were much injured.

Mr. Auchenbach, of the Nail Works, has moved into the residence recently occupied by Major R. H. Foster on Linn street. Major Foster's family, we believe, will not fix their location permanently for the present, but will visit among their relatives in the county. The Major looks forward to the possibility of removing to Harrisburg eventually. We exceedingly regret to part with this very agreeable family, as their varied accomplishments and high intelligence render them valuable members of any community.

The family of Levi Straub will in a few days remove to Altoona. Mr. S. has been engaged there for several years and he hoped to be able to return to Bellefonte where he could again be with his family. But fate ordains otherwise and dictates that their very pleasant home in this place shall be exchanged for one in the railroad city, where we hope prosperity will attend them, for we are sure that they will be followed by the best wishes of admiring Bellefonte friends.

The ball given by Company B, N. G., Monday evening of last week was a pleasant affair and was largely attended. Good dancing music was furnished by musicians who, we believe, came from Unionville.

James Shaw, who, it is said, hails from Bedford county, was arrested last week for perpetrating a very clumsy forgery on Mr. Tom Collens. He is now in Fort Dunkle where he has time to discover that verily the way of the transgressor is hard.

A note from Philipsburg says: "Work has been commenced on Pierce's Opera House, Philipsburg. Messrs Taylor and Wood have the contract. The building will be first class in every respect with a seating capacity of 1800."

—Commissioner Griest, of Unionville, tips the scales at 217 pounds. That'll do for the hero of the Centre county history.

Three Paragraphs About Philipsburg.

Timothy Titus writes us three interesting paragraphs containing late news from Philipsburg. First he announces with much regret the failure of the general merchandise firm of Fleck & Miller. Their store was closed on Saturday, the 24th ult. It is said that their liabilities amount to about $7,000, a large part of which was due solely to their generosity. During the period of the prolonged strike the proprietors, unwilling in their great kindness to see any suffering, trusted the striking workmen to almost unlimited amounts and have since been able to collect very little of it. As a consequence, they were obliged to succumb. The adversities of such generous men have awaked universal sympathy and they will be aided by all in their efforts to resume business again, particularly as they say they will pay the full amount of all debts.

A lively contest for council grew out of the elections in the Second ward, in which two members of council were to be elected, one for three years and the other for one year. The nominees were Owen Hancock, three years, and J. W. Jones, one year, their opponents being A. J. Dress and Robert Manley. The ballots were terribly mixed, Mr. Hancock receiving votes for the one year term and J. W. Jones votes for the three-year term. It is impossible to decide who is elected and probably all the nominees will resort to a $25,000 contest for what seem to be empty honors.

A sporting event occurred on Monday afternoon, March 26, which will long be remembered. It was a three-mile running race between Thomas Checell, of Houtzdale, and James Johnson, the half-mile champion of Western Pennsylvania. Both are remarkably agile. As the stakes were $500 the affair attracted great interest and drew together immense crowds. Among those present were were many betting men from Clearfield, Houtzdale and Pittsburgh, in addition to the local "sports." The interest in the result ran very high and it is said that $4,000 changed hands. The men seemed to run the three miles as swift as the wind. Johnson, the champion, just won, and that was all. So close was he pressed that at the ending of the final round he was compelled to literally throw himself forward to be declared the winner.

Recent Legislation.

The L. H. Journal includes the following among the important items of recent State Legislation: The general scalp bill introduced by Colonel Burchfield at this session of the Legislature was passed by the house last Tuesday. This bill provides $20 for the scalp of a wolf; $1 for wild cats and foxes; 50 cents for minks, weasels, skunks, hawks and owls. The scalp must be taken before the county commissioners instead of before the justice of the peace as the present law provides, where oath must be taken that the animal was killed in the county at a certain date. A penalty is attached for the punishment of persons committing fraud.

A bill introduced by the colonel providing for the organization of a signal corps in the National Guard of the State, also passed the house finally last week. The Altoona hospital bill, which was reported favorably by the committee, has not yet been reached by the house.

The bill providing for the extension of the time of closing the soldiers orphans' schools passed the house finally by a vote of 147 to 2. This bill was introduced by Representative Walker, of Erie, at the instance of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Juniata Valley Editorial Association.

A special meeting of the Juniata Valley Editorial Association, says the Altoona Tribune, will be held in Huntingdon at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Miller hotel, on Saturday, April 7, 1883, to take action relative to foreign advertisements and to consider article three of the constitution.

Article III, section 1. The object of this association shall be to promote the business and the financial interests of the members of the newspaper fraternity by a mutual interchange of views to protect each other against dishonest advertising agents and fraudulent advertisers generally, and and to cultivate a friendly relation among the members.

Also to afford an opportunity to all persons eligible, who have not as yet become members of the association, to become members.

—A Huntingdon county editor keeps two cows and milks them himself. It is said that some of his brightest thoughts have come to him while being kicked across the stable.

—The ice is still about a foot thick some places along one side of both High and Bishop streets.

Fashion Notes.

Ladies have a fondness for costumes that are Worth much money.

Now that Lent is over brighter colors should make their appearance.

There is almost an endless variety of magnificent materials employed in the formation of costly toilets, the larger portion being of fabrics of the "stand-alone" order, such as will retain their richness and splendor for an indefinite period.

Exquisitely made tulle and crape dresses are highly admired by some. Although beautiful they are perishable. They can be made very expensive by trimming with lace which costs three times as much per yard as the dress fabric.

Wouldn't a Bellefonte girl look stunning arrayed in a robe which is said to be a trained princess slip of lilac faille completely covered with Persian mauve silk tulle, edged with seven inch ruffles of cream—white lace? The drapings of this robe are marvels of French manipulation and deft grace. Trailing garlands of blush roses and white clematis blossoms may be arranged among the folds o tulle, completing the effect of a most charming toilet.

Curtin on the Tariff.

The following extract from a speech on the tariff delivered in Congress by ex-Governor Curtin is said to express, in part, his opinion of the measure:

There are other interests of Pennsylvania which, in my judgment, are not properly protected in this bill, and it is to be hoped that inasmuch as the country has been waiting in expectation of some measure of relief, that the interest I now advocate may struggle through the coming season and that the next Congress will correct the neglect of their interests in this bill and provide for them a fair and reasonable protection. In justice to my constituents, in justice to the charcoal interest of my State and of other States of this Union, I protest against the injustice this bill does them. I would be unworthy to be their representative if I remained silent when I see, through ignorance or design, such a heavy blow struck at their interest and the prosperity of the localities in which charcoal iron is a staple production.

—The following from the Bradford Evening Star will be found interesting as the road alluded to passes through this county:

The Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad Company are now going ahead with the Susquehanna and Allegheny road, which will run between Pauxsutawney and Milton, Pa., 150 miles, to connect with the Catawissa branch of the Reading system. Charles E. Webster, who has been with the company for some time, has been put in charge of the engineers who are to locate the line of road. Six crews have been sent out and four more crews are being put in readiness to start.

The railroad will pass very near Bellefonte, the proposed route going through Armor's Gap, near Mr. Yocum's residence and on through Milesburg. A party of engineers are now at work at a point not far from Milesburg.

Death of Mr. George Jack.

One of the oldest citizens of Boalsburg—Mr. George Jack—passed away from earth on Tuesday of last week, about 5 o'clock. His health had not been good for a long time, but he had been severely ill only about four weeks. He was too old to survive a great physical prostration and after a few brief days of suffering his spirit fled from its earthly tenement. He was in the 81st year of his age. He leaves three daughters and two sons to mourn his death. The funeral took place at 10 o'clock a. m. on Saturday.

—Perfect order and good management prevails at the Bellefonte Water Works. Under the management of Engineer Bateman the machinery is kept in excellent condition, the boiler works splendidly and the supply of water gives great satisfaction. We have every reason to believe that he will be retained in position next year, as the least thought of change would be received with pronounced expressions of disfavor by the people.

—Tuesday was Chief Burgess Wilson I. Fleming's twenty-seventh birthday. To celebrate the event quite a large company of his friends assembled at his residence during the evening. Their visit was a complete surprise to Mr. F., although his wife was a party to the plot and had made abundant preparation for the reception of guests. A very enjoyable social gathering was the result.

—The trouting season, which began on the 1st of April was looked forward to with a degree of pleasurable anticipation by anglers. We are informed that the speckled beauties will probably bite more quickly at a fly this season than heretofore from the fact that the severity of the past season has excluded from them that kind of food for so long.

—A letter addressed "Messrs E. J. Rideout & Co., 110 Barklay St., New York," is held for postage at the postoffice.

—Mr. Isaac Cline, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was last week a guest at the Bush House. Mr. Cline is well known by many of our citizens as he lived in Bellefonte during a period of about six years when he was an employe of the Bellefonte Glass Works, and was the first man to blow a cylinder of glass in this place. He is very popular among glass blowers in general and window glass blowers in particular as he has been elevated by them to the presidency of the Window Glass Blowers Association of the United States. He has recently been of great service to the glass workers of New Jersey by his distinguished efforts in behalf of the striking workmen, the employers being influenced by him to give the men the wages they demanded. In the pursuit of this business he has crossed the Allegheny mountains fifteen times since the 15th of last September. On Tuesday evening, the 27th ult., he addressed the assembled glass blowers and other glass workers in the hall of the Logan Hose House.

A Fine Home.

Passengers on the B. E. V. R. R. going to or from Tyrone will notice, at Fowler Station, a beautiful place. It is the home of Mr. John Fowler, an extensive lumberman and stock and grain grower. The dwelling house, barn, stock and poultry houses are models of beauty. The same degree of excellence exhibited in the construction and finish of the house is displayed in everything else, and the owner has, indeed, a garden in the wilderness, which has been made to "blossom as the rose."—*L. Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggists for it. Each bottle is warranted. Smith, Kline & Co., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York. 14 24 1y

—All the passenger cars building for the Pennsylvania railroad company in the Altoona shops are six inches narrower than usual. It has been found that this change makes the cars run more easily.

—Mr. Uriah Stover, of Benner township, succeeds Mr. L. D. Shreckengast as manager of the Valentine farm, south of Bellefonte. Mr. Shreckengast moves to the property of Mrs. Gettle, near Pleasant Gap.—Democrat.

has just received another lot of small Stem Winding Watches in Silver and Nickel, just the thing to make a boy happy, as it's the height of any boy's ambition to carry a Watch. These are reliable and serviceable, and are not expensive.

Also some more of those little bits of Watches which are so fashionable among the girls. These are much worn in other places and are considered just the thing.

A large line of Children's sets of Knife, Fork and Spoon with and without cases in Extra and Triple Plate. They are decidedly elegant goods; much more so than at any other season. A very few dozen of the Genuine Rogers' Triple-Plated Knives. They are as cheap as the imitation and worth twice the price of any other knife offered.

A Gold Headed Cane would likely be just the thing you are looking for; they are useful, ornamental and always appreciated.

Gold Thimbles from the lowest in price to the most elegant. They are always just the thing and last a lifetime, and you can make no mistake

See the Castors and Cake Baskets.

I would like to show you my leading Tea Set—cheap and just the thing for actual use, Copper Bottom, and can be set on the stove, and used the same as Britannia or tinware, and they come very little higher than a common unplated set.

Some people thought it foolish to bring a stock of Fine Diamonds to Bellefonte, but they will find considerably more Diamonds worn here after the holidays than before.

Your attention is particularly called to Japanese wares. They are genuine goods made in Japan and not in Jersey. They must be closed out this week as I have no room to keep them over. They are all below the cost of importation and some of them are given away for nothing.

ORE IN KING.

A Word about His Rule in the Buffalo Run Valley.

When we begin to contemplate the boundless resources of the section of country in which our homes are located all agencies of power and wealth hide their diminished heads and sink into utter insignificance in comparison with the treasures of iron ore which lie beneath the surface and are imbedded in the everlasting hills. We are glad that the cereal and root productions of our county are so excellent and its fruitage of such superior character; its coal has warmed and will continue to warm many firesides; but the one inexhaustible resource which seems almost without beginning and promises never to end is iron ore. It opens up an opportunity for the employment of thousands of workmen and hundreds of skilled artisans. Scores of furnaces may be heated to the intensest degree of heat and countless bars of metal issue from its glowing depths, for myriads of years, and still we shall not behold the beginning of the end. One of the most favorable regions of the county for its wonderful resources of iron ore is the Buffalo Run Valley, and, in short, all the region west of us.

We find that the operations in mining ore were begun in Buffalo Run Valley earlier than in any other portion of the county. Its history dates back a century—certainly before the year 1800. General Samuel Miles was one of the earliest pioneers in this industry, but no operator since the ore was first used has given it the amount of attention and investigation which it deserved, and only recently was its immense value fully realized. From Bellefonte to the extreme limit of the county is one unbroken stretch of land containing rich deposits of ore. At almost every point it is equally rich. On every farm outcropings of the product are observed and the owners look forward to the time when it will prove to them a source of large revenue. Through the heart of this region the Buffalo Run railroad will thread its way, and the powerful iron horse will sound its reverberating whistle. As the workmen dig down hills and fill up valleys they encounter the vast beds of ore, and the subject has been broached, from an economical point of view, of constructing the road bed of this material.

The ore is perhaps the best in the world for all purposes for which iron ore is used. It is brown hematite and is usually denominated 50 per cent. ore, which term expresses its least value as it has been tested and proved to contain as high as 73 per cent. of iron. It is of that degree of alloy that renders it more easily and cheaply converted into iron. McCoy & Linn usually excavate from 20 to 60 feet deep although ore has been found without evidences of a diminished quantity 117 feet in depth. Thus when the railroad is completed and improved machinery put up all along the line for the purpose, the territory gone over for so many years past may be again excavated to a greater depth. It is noticeable that the deeper the excavations the richer is the quality of ore.

This, then, is the territory for capital; the one place where it may be invested with the assurance of profit. We ask those who wish to engage in a manufacturing business to watch carefully for the completion of the railroad and to make arrangements for the construction of furnaces at once.

Death of Mrs. Kate P. Dale.

Last Thursday morning, at 4:30 o'clock, death invaded the home of Mr. A. W. Dale, who resides near Lemont, and removed from it Mr. D's beloved wife, Mrs. Kate P. Dale. The deceased had been ill only about two weeks, and her comparatively sudden death is a severe blow to her husband and family and her numerous relatives and friends, by whom she was held in the highest esteem because of her many virtues and lovable traits of character. She was the daughter of the venerable David Keller, of Boalsburg. Her husband and four small children survive to mourn her death. To the husband her death means the removal of one who was a most devoted partner and sympathizer in all his joys and sorrows, in all his good and adverse fortune. The children are deprived of the one to whom naturally belonged their training and education and are entitled to earnest sympathy. All these duties she fulfilled with more than ordinary faithfulness, and consequently her departure will be more sincerely deplored. Her age was about 33 years. She was a devoted, earnest and consistent member of the Lutheran church. Her sorrowing relatives and friends have reason for most abundant consolation in this their hour of affliction. Every tear may sparkle as the dew drop, every feeling of anguish be illumined by a heavenly hope; for the bright Sun of Righteousness was her buckler and shield and her faith has triumphed gloriously.

The funeral took place at the home of her husband, near Lemont, on Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Died.

HUNTER.—On the 14th of March, at her home on Buffalo Run, Miss Martha A. Hunter, aged 54 years, 1 month and 17 days.

For more than a year Miss Hunter had been a victim of that "dread enemy" consumption. Although slow and deceitful at first, its course proved sure and terrible, with death as the result about eighteen months after it seized its victim. About two months before her death Miss Hunter's condition grew much worse, and her physician pronounced her recovery impossible and that her end was drawing very near. Her predicted fate she received with remarkable coolness and apparent unconcern, viewing death from a spiritual point of view, rather than a worldly. She had been a faithful, consistent member of the Methodist church since her childhood and that faith proved its power and strength on her death-bed. When thoughts of earth are laid aside and we know that death awaits us, then is the moment when our faith is tested. Her's bore the test; not a murmur escaped her lips during the whole period of her sickness, and when friends mourned by her bedside when dying, she assured them of the untold bliss that awaited her in heaven.

Miss Hunter was a daughter of the venerable Robert Hunter, and was a consoling companion for him in his declining years. Her death was a severe blow to him. She lived the life of a christian lady, and her death (although her gain) is mourned by all who knew her. H.

A Worthless Confession.

Silas Gray is in prison in Cumberland county awaiting execution for the murder of a Mrs. McCready. Meanwhile, one Hiram Bowermaster, who it appears was just released from the Eastern penitentiary, sends a postal card to ex-Lieutenant Governor John Latta, Gray's counsel, to the effect that a man named Jack Pettys, also a convict in the Eastern Penitentiary, confessed to him that he (Pettys) committed the murder. An investigation will be made, but we do not believe it will establish the truth of Bowermaster's statement, as he is evidently a person unworthy of belief. Ten years ago he was arrested in this county and taken to Huntingdon, where he was tried for highway robbery and sentenced to serve a term of seven years in the Western penitentiary. This is the first we have heard of him since that occurrence. The execution of Gray is to take place on the 24th of May.

A Substitute for Gas.

In view of the fact that Bellefonte illuminating gas does not give good satisfaction why not try the electric light? Who will take the initiatory steps toward organizing an electric light company? Danville citizens are elated over the organization of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, which is composed of the enterprising business men of the place. Philipsburg, Williamsport and Harrisburg have the electric light on the streets and in the business houses. It is as cheap and more satisfactory than gas.

—The number of visitors to the summer resorts will be large. Some of our friends have already commenced to pack their trunks preparatory to their departure.

—A brief notice published a few days ago to the effect that the supply of water furnished to Bellefonte consumers "gave great satisfaction" has elicited a remark from one or two parties. These remarks are to the effect that while in some instances persons residing in the higher portions of town are insufficiently supplied no fault is attributed to the very capable young man who operates the water works, but chiefly to other causes, the principal one of which seems to be that the main pipe supplying the smaller arteries is not large enough to carry the requisite amount of water. It is also believed that if the main pipe were tapped from the bottom instead of at the sides the swift flow of water through it would be more likely to seek an outlet through the branch pipe. The fact that in one case the supply is insufficient along the main pipe, near where it leaves the reservoir, seems to demonstrate the truth of this. The Council have always been peculiarly fortunate in their selection of the proper person to fill the responsible position of engineer. We were opposed to former changes, and slight difficulties afterwards experienced demonstrated that it would have been more advantageous if they had not been made. But that department of the borough service is now so well supplied that the same reason exists with double force against another change. The engineer and consulting engineer are gentlemen of excellent character and unimpeachable reputation and can be safely entrusted with the care of the water works another year.

—Major General J. F. Hartranft, of National Guard, on Thursday afternoon, issued from division headquarters an order fixing from August 11 to 18 as the time for the annual encampment. The order leaves the selection of the place to the brigade commanders, but requires them to select such a point as will save expenses in the cost of transportation. The quartermaster and commissary departments will furnish the necessary transportation, camp and garrison equipage and subsistance. Brigade commanders are charged with the execution of specific details. The orders from division headquarters pertaining to the encampment at Lewistown, Pa., will be adhered to as far as practicable.

—An acquaintance of William E. Brown, formerly of this place, received a letter from him the other day. William is now a private in Troop D, 6th Cavalry, of the Regular Army, located at Fort Grant, Arizona Territory. In describing Arizona he says: "Arizona is a big country with very few towns in it and very small at that, the largest being Tucson, and it is about the size of Milesburg. They are all about a hundred miles apart. The travel from place to place is dangerous, because of the many Mexicans, Indians and cow boys."

New Keys for Mail Locks.

All the iron mail locks now in the service are soon to be substituted by new and improved locks which require an entirely different key and which will be denominated "Genera Mail Locks" instead of "Iron Mail Locks." The new key is now being distributed to postmasters. It is larger than the key now in use, and has a safety chain attached. The new locks will be issued as soon as every postoffice in the United States is provided with the key, and as fast as the new locks are put in service the old ones will be withdrawn.

A Card.

We were almost moved to tears at the pure, unassumed modesty of our worthy President, Joe W. Furey, when giving the doings of the Astronomical Society of Bellefonte, considering that he was present at the important meeting alluded to in the Watchman, and made many learned remarks himself.

BELLEFONTE ASTRONOMICAL SOCIETY.

—Mr. Philip Collins was in Bellefonte last week. He says there are about 125 Italians and a few Americans employed on the railroad, and that the number will be augmented as occasion requires. They are now at work in "The Barrens" and will construct the road in the direction of State College.

—From the Houtzdale, Clearfield county, Observer:

Judge Mayer's action in refusing to grant additional license in this county meets with general approval—there are entirely too many bar-rooms now, at least in this neighborhood, for the number of hotels, there being about ten of the former to one of the latter.

The 5 o'clock train on Friday afternoon conveyed with it Mr. J. R. Van-Ormer, junior editor of the Centre Democrat. He goes to the City of Brotherly Love, and although he professes that his mission is one purely of a business character, we strongly suspect, in view of the fact that the sweet simplicity of the Quaker maiden there exists in its greatest luxuriance, that something more than "brotherly love" urges him onward—that he has sought and found the heart, hand and fortune of a millionaire maiden on Chestnut street. He is worthy the greatest good fortune and we hope his mission, whatever it is, may be crowned with success. He will return to-day.
